Welcome to another edition of NOSEHAIR, the last for this semester. Yes, that's right, we're coming to the end of semester, and you know what that means – exam time (apologies to those who were in denial). Now the thought of that might send you in a spin, but fear not! Here at NOSEHAIR we have some thoughts on the good things about the next few weeks:

1. You learn so much! That may seem obvious, but as a former male science faculty leader recently remarked, until you've graduated you just don't realise how privileged you were to have the opportunity to constantly learn. So make the most of it!

2. It's yet another opportunity to glorify our Lord on campus. Part of our Christian witness is showing that we can be diligent at (and also good at!) aspects that are otherwise part of the secular world, so being faithful in study (whilst not being over competitive) is a great way to "shine like [a] star" – Philippians 2:15.

3. Exam time means it's almost AN-CON!!! You've probably all either been to Ancon or heard stories about how great it is, so we don't need to tell you that all over again. We will mention however, the appropriateness of the topic, 'Be still and know that I am God'. It is very easy to get caught up in our hectic, science-student lives, and not take the time to meditate on our creator, as He's revealed Himself to us in the Bible. So we hope that you will join us in a great week of Bible study, fellowship, touch football, and of course, pegging.

In Christ,
Iain and Deanne

There was an aeroplane with a pilot, a doctor, a scientist, a minister and a backpacker. Suddenly all engines lose power and the plane is going to crash. The pilot turns to the passengers and says "there are 5 of us but only 4 parachutes, and I'm taking one." At that he took a parachute and jumped out of the plane. The doctor jumps up and says "I'm a surgeon and I save people lives every day. The world needs me."

And he took a parachute and jumped out of the plane. Then the scientist jumped up and declared "I'm the country's top thinker. The world needs my superb analytical skills." and he grabbed a parachute and jumped. The minister turns to the backpacker and says "Listen son, I've had a long and fruitful life, and I'm ready to finish up. Why don't you..." The backpacker interrupts him "There's no need," he says "the scientist just took my backpack."

Q: what do you get when you cross an elephant and a banana?

1st Year Dinner, Thursday 4th May, 2006- Review

Every year. Just when we think “Hey we know everyone!” a whole new bunch of first years suddenly hit the corridors, bringing freshness, vitality, and a new wave of trendiness to the campus. Well this simply won’t do! We must understand these first years! We must get to know them! They must become like us!

With that (kind of) in mind, the Science EU 1st Year Dinner was organised! Around 20 new and not so new faces got together for an evening of Thai food, fun, making new friends, and just working together to make the university experience that much more interesting.

After meeting at our secret location (right outside Carlsaw) we headed up to Thai-la-Ong, one of the many Thai restaurants to be found on King St, Newtown. After settling down (and quickly re-arranging the room) our esteemed Faculty Leader Deanne made us all stand up again! One ice-breaker game and many awkward silences / new friends (depending on your point of view) later, we were allowed to sit down again.

The evening continued, with general good times seeming to be everyone’s favourite dish. We met Mel (one of our staff workers), and then Toby (our other staff worker) gave a fantastic quick talk about what motivates us here in uni (apart from free BBQ’s). Awesome Thai food was served and promptly eaten, and as the night went on many awesome relationships were begun (I hope). Alas all good things must come to an end, and eventually people were forced to disperse. Good-byes were said, tears flowed (well nearly I’m sure), and people shuffled off into the night. The 1st year dinner was over, but uni was only beginning!
